ENVIRONMENTAL VIBRATIONS: PREDICTION, MONITORING, MITIGATION AND EVALUATION - PROCEEDINGS OF THE FOURTH INTERNATIONAL SYMPOSIUM ON ENVIRONMENTAL VIBRATION (IN 2 VOLUMES)

2009. Hardcover. Condition: New. 1st Edition. Language : English Preface The environmental vibrations, caused mainly due to train/road traffic, construction activities and factory operations, are being investigated, globally, for their prediction, monitoring, mitigation and evaluation, basically, to improve the quality of life and robust infrastructure in the modern high tech society. The School of Civil Engineering, Beijing Jiaotong University in China is honored to be the organizer of the 4th International Symposium on Environmental Vibrations: Prediction, Monitoring, mitigation and Evaluation (ISEV2009). This symposium, sequel to the first one held in Hangzhou, China in October 2003, the second one in Okayama, Japan in September 2005, and the third one in Taipei in November 2007, provides an international forum to exchange the knowledge, ideas and experiences for pursuing research on prediction, control and mitigation of environmental vibrations. This series of meetings on environmental vibrations were made possible due to the continuous efforts of four professors: Prof. Yih-Hsing Pao, Honorary Chairman of the symposium, who belongs both to the National Taiwan University and Zhejiang University, Prof. Hirokazu Takeyima of Okayama University, Prof. Yunmin Chen of Zhejiang University, and Prof. Yeong-Bin Yang of the National Taiwan University. This symposium is aimed at bringing together the specialists, researchers and practitioners in environment vibrations, to review recent achievements in the advancement of knowledge and understanding in these areas, to share the latest developments in research, and to address the challenges faced by related engineering projects. Similar to the previous symposia, topics covered by this symposium include the prediction, monitoring, mitigation and evaluation of ground and structural vibrations caused by train/road traffic, construction activities, and factory operations. In order to record this international exchange of experience, knowledge and research discussed during the conference and make it available to the research community and working professionals, the proceedings are presented in a book form which contains the invited and regular papers written and presented by...
