Excerpt from The Herald of the Golden Age, Vol. 12: January, 1909 Mental sunshine is largely dependent upon physical conditions. To live to our highest in all things that pertain to us, and to lend a hand as best we can to all others for this same end. To aid in righting the wrongs that cross our path by pointing the wrong-doer to a better way, and thus aid him in becoming a power for good. To turn toward and keep our faces always to the light, knowing that we are then always safe, and that we shall travel with joy the open road. To love the fields and the wild owers, the stars, the far-open sea, the soft, warm earth, and to live much with them alone; but to love struggling and weary men and women and every pulsing, living creature better. To do our own thinking, listening quietly to the Opinions of others, but to be sufficiently men and women to act always upon our own convictions. To do our duty as we see it, regardless of the opinions of others - seeming gain or loss, temporary blame or praise. To remain in nature always sweet and simple and humble, and therefore strong. To play the part of neither fool nor knave by attempting to judge another, but to give that same time to living more worthily ourselves.
