Two Indian clubs standing in one corner, also a base ball bat. Piano and stool. Doors right and left of stage. John Jones enters L. Mr. Jones. If ever a man was sick of business, I am sick of this one. A theatrical agent indeed. You are the servant of servants. Strive as hard as you may, you cannot please everybody, and I sometimes think you cannot please anybody. It is nothing but fret and worry, bad debts, poor receipts, and I wish I might sell out and give up the business and engage in something more congenial. Miss Augur enters L. Miss Augur. Is this Mr. Jones, the theatrical agent? Jones. Yes, ma am. Miss A. I wish to get a position on the stage. Jones. Have you had any experience? Miss A. Not a great deal, no, sir. Jones. Have...
