It was necessary to repeat this several times during performance of operation, owing to the enfeebled condition of the patient. She died thirty-six hours after leaving table from shock. The intravenous injection is given credit for completion of operation; without it death would have resulted on the table. Case IV. J. C, colored, aged 26, married six years; sterile. Multiple fibroid tumors of uterus. Myomectomy performed in this case. Tumors varying in size from a coconut to a filbert were found. The uterus, right ovary and tube were preserved. Patient discharged eighteenth day after operation; left hospital twenty-first day for her home. It has been customary heretofore in cases of this character to sacrifice the uterus and ovaries. This should never be resorted to when possible to prevent it. Suprapubic Cystotomy for Vesical Calculi. J. S., colored, aged 2 years, male. Was operated for stone by suprabubic method; calculus removed; weighed 100 grains. The bladder incision was closed by suture, and it was never necessary to use a catheter in this case. Patient discharged from hospital on twelfth day after operation; abdominal incision well healed; the little patient entirely relieved. This case was of much interest. The manner of handling it taught us that a great many of the bungling appliances recommended in the performance of such operations are altogether useless. Cholecystotomy. Mrs. F. M., White, aged 24, widow. Was jaundiced upon admission to hospital, and gave history...
