N.B.--(The problems of this chapter are to be studied simultaneously with those of Chapter I.) The following are the solids commonly used to illustrate the principles of Solid Geometry: --The cube, prism, and pyramid; the sphere, cone, and cylinder. A cube is a solid having six equal faces, all squares. A right prism is a solid having two equal and similar bases, with rectangular faces perpendicular to them. If the faces be not perpendicular to the bases, the prism is oblique. A right pyramid has one base and a number of triangular faces, meeting in a point over the centre of that base. This point is called the apex. If the apex be not over the centre of the base, the pyramid is oblique. Prisms and pyramids are named from the shapes of their bases, as square prism, hexagonal pyramid, c. A sphere is a solid whose surface is at all parts equidistant from a point..
