SAVE ME FROM THE LION S MOUTH

Struik Publishers (Pty) Ltd, South Africa, 2013. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 218 x 145 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book. In many parts of Africa a front line has developed between humans and wild animals. People are stressfully aware of their vulnerability, whether from predators that eat their stock, or from marauders that trash their crops: elephants, hippos, bushpigs, baboons, cane rats, dense sun-blocking swarms of locusts and quelea finches that can wipe out an entire season s crop and leave a community starving. And a startling number of people in Africa are killed by wildlife each year. This reality is rarely conveyed to investors in wildlife conservation or to visitors to wildlife sanctuaries. But the battle lines are drawn between communities directly impacted by the remnant wildlife of an increasingly congested Africa, and the paymasters of a first-world population of voyeurs. Can all the players co-exist? This controversial expose of the conflict between humans and wildlife lifts the lid on the battle for turf: the future of conservation will depend on the relationship established between wildlife authorities and those bearing the brunt along the front line. The African noun for wildlife is nyama meat. For millennia, bush meat was the birthright of rural communities. Now, over much of the continent even where protein is scarce it is illegal to hunt it. As a result, communities are developing foraging units of well-armed men. They do not see poaching even the merciless slaughter of rhinos as being, in any way, reprehensible. Poachers are heroes. The urban public, even in Africa, are unaware that, annually, along the eastern side of Africa from Mozambique to the upper Nile, thousands of rural dwellers are eaten by lions, leopards, hyenas and crocodiles or are killed defending their crops from marauding elephants, hippos and buffaloes....
