Brand New Book. Excerpt from Admiral George Dewey: A Sketch of the Man IN the first chapter of this work those points are discussed which usually find place in a preface; hence only a few words are needed here. Although most of the matter published is new and freshly taken from the note-book which I carefully kept at Manila from May, 1898, to March, 1899, selections have appeared over my name in harper s magazine and har per s weekly, and in addresses and interviews which have from time to time been quoted in the public press. I would beg those who read this unassuming attempt to portray Admiral Dewey, the man, to bear in mind that it lays no claim to special literary excellence, but is largely a collection of leaves from my note book, in which the language used is simple and not studied. The short time, moreover, at my disposal after the determination to write the book has handicapped me in my efforts to give it that...
