The general text-books on dyeing devote little space to this particular side of the question. They deal with the operations of the dye-house, rather than with the principles which seem to govern the actual practice of this branch of industry. It is advisable that the modern dyer should have some knowledge of the general reactions, which give rise to the results obtained in the many processes, involved in the dyeing, and bleaching of textile fibres. Without some such knowledge, it is difficult to appreciate their nature; or be in a position to control their working in a systematic manner. To obtain this under present conditions, it is necessary to make a more, or less, tedious search over...
