We all know the struggle of trying to lose a few pounds. Our year starts with a resolution to drop three pants sizes, climaxes into the dreaded summer months of bathing suit weather and then resolves once again to feelings of regret and remorse as we enjoy yet another helping of mom s Christmas feast. Although many of us wish that we could go to the gym and enjoy only eating salad, the reality is that our busy lives keep us from pursuing a weight loss regiment for more than a few weeks. And once we start getting the results we want, we end up cheating on the program and binge on a sugary, carb- filled meal. The problem is, there are many issues with dieting programs that you find on the internet or in bookstores. Firstly, these regiments only account for a few weeks or months worth of meals. This means that after going through the entire meal plan and grocery list three or four times, you are left having to make the same boring recipes again and again in order to keep off the weight you just lost. How many times are you supposed to go through the same cycle before it stops working or you get so tired of the same food that you cheat on your diet? Secondly, most recipes that are included in weight loss programs make serving sizes big enough to feed a family of four. If you are single, why would you make so much food for just one meal? Or perhaps your partner does not want to participate in this new meal plan and you have to struggle to cut down...
