This item is printed on demand - Print on Demand Neuware - Essay from the year 2004 in the subject Politics - International Politics - General and Theories, printed single-sided, grade: 2+ (B+), University of Kent (Brussels School of International Studies), language: English, abstract: 85 years after its formal establishment, the discipline of International Relations is currently engaged in what is known as the Third Debate. At the heart of this debate is the question to what extent can society be studied in the same way as nature. Positivists hold that the social world is not fundamentally different from the natural world and that, as a result, the same epistemology applies. Positivists aim to explain the social world and believe that causal laws and generalisations can be found through observation. Post-positivists argue that the social and the natural world are not alike and that scientific explanation is neither a valid nor an adequate form of inquiry for the social sciences. According to this view, the social world primarily consists of ideas and concepts that cannot be translated into scientific terms but need to be interpreted. Hence,...

This is the finest publication we have read through right up until now. Better than never, though I am quite late to start reading this one. It has been written in a remarkably easy way in fact it is only after I finished reading through this book that I basically altered me, affected the way I think.
